

Matthew Grey

Matthew Grey is Adventure Ecology's Expedition Co-ordinator. He joined Adventure Ecology in February 2008 at the beginning of the Plastiki project.

Before joining Adventure Ecology, Matthew worked for a company that specialises in the construction of emergency bridging solutions in remote parts of the world. Prior to that he served for five years as a Captain with the British Army's Corps of Engineers. He studied photography at university and worked for several years as a freelance editorial and travel photographer.

Matthew brings with him a strong background in practical project management and remote area logistics. He has travelled extensively and worked in over thirty different countries all over the world.
