

Singeli Agnew Biography

Singeli Agnew began her career as a photojournalist in New Mexico and Montana, covering local politics and the environment. Since then she has lived and reported from India, Nepal, Cambodia and France, covering a wide range of social and scientific issues.

Her award-winning short documentary Pollen Nation was the first film to look at the phenomena of industrialized pollination – it was screened at festivals across the US and Europe and has been translated into several languages.

Singeli has written and produced work for the San Francisco Chronicle, PBS FRONTLINE/World, Current TV, Time and Newsweek, and was also the Associate Producer for filmmaker Steven Okazaki's Academy-Award nominated film The Conscience of Nhem En.

Working now primarily as a cinematographer, Singeli's work has appeared in broadcast productions for PBS, HBO and National Geographic, as well as numerous independent films. She lives in Berkeley, CA.

Official Partner

Technology Partner

Global Satellite Communications Sponsor

Expedition Supplier

